Welcome to our Almanac for Semester 1, 2021/22 – and welcome, especially, to our new doctoral researchers. For this Almanac we've compiled all the events this semester, running across faculties, the Doctoral College, and the Student Union, into one handy guide. You'll find skills development sessions, guest speakers from around the world, induction sessions and social sessions, "café" drop-ins and Canvas hang-outs, our annual Christmas lecture, and much more. On the other side of lockdown, we're working hard to strike a balance between online sessions, which allow access for those who may not be able to be physically present on our campuses, and periodic in-person sessions, since we've all missed being able to meet up. Many of these sessions are offered to develop and expand your skills base and speed you forward to a timely submission and successful defence, and award, of your doctorate, and equip you for the job market beyond.

We were particularly delighted to receive such stellar feedback, from you, a few months ago with the results of the national Postgraduate Researchers Experience Survey (and thanks to those who completed the survey). Among other highlights, we were 5th in the UK for our Research Culture and 11th for Professional Development. So please do attend these events as much as possible, in order to take advantage of our UK-leading research environment!

David Mynne presents The Canterbury Tales by Geoffrey Chaucer

Wednesday 15th September 2021, 19:30.

Arena Theatre, Wulfruna Street, Wolverhampton

Book via:- <https://www.wlv.ac.uk/news-and-events/events/2021/september/david-mynne-presents-the-canterbury-tales-by-geoffrey-chaucer.php>

Welcome to 'The Canterbury', an Olde English Inn, Infamous around these parts for villainy and sin. The floor is caked in sawdust for soaking up the spit, And the air is thick with stories, told with wisdom, guile and wit. Some stories are romantic, some are bawdy, others scary, And there are tales about the devil that should make you oh so wary. Some are beautifully poetic and some a little coarser; A medieval medley from the pen of Geoffrey Chaucer! From the company that brought you 'A Christmas Carol', 'Dracula' and 'The Odyssey' comes a one-man performance of 'The Canterbury Tales'.

Revered as one of the most important works in English literature, 'The Canterbury Tales' paints an ironic and critical portrait of English society in the middle-ages. All of life is here in these few bawdy, funny, serious and sometimes shocking, short stories. Experience a journey down the foul and fetid footpaths of fourteenth-century England, told with the usual irreverence, wit and silliness!

There will be middle-ages naughtiness and nonsense. There may be tights and a codpiece. There will, no doubt, be some medieval swearing... Let's Party, like it's 1387!! This is Chaucer... but not as you've ever seen it. Suitable for adults and older children (12+)

Sustainability and Responsible Research

Thursday 23rd September 2021, 16:00, Online.

Maria Ivanova (PhD), Associate Professor of Global Governance, Director of the Global Governance and Human Security PhD Program, and Director of the Centre for Governance and Sustainability at the University of Massachusetts Boston.

Contact Khaoula Omhand (K.Omhand@wlv.ac.uk) for further information.

Maria Ivanova is an international relations and environmental policy scholar specializing in governance and sustainability. She was born and raised in Bulgaria and arrived in the United States in 1992 to attend Mount Holyoke College. She began studying international environmental policy as an undergraduate and continued in this field as a graduate student at Yale University. She pursued a joint master's degree in International Relations and Environmental Management and then her PhD at Yale.

Maria's work focuses on the performance of international institutions, implementation of international environmental agreements, and sustainability. She has been studying the United Nations Environment Programme and her book, "The Untold Story of the World's Leading Environmental Institution: UNEP at Fifty", was published by MIT Press in 2021. Her current work examines national performance on global environmental conventions, and she engages with countries in East Africa to inform policy.

From 2014 to 2016, Ivanova served on the Scientific Advisory Board of the UN Secretary-General, Ban Ki-moon. In 2020, she began a four-year term on the Joint Scientific Committee of the World Climate Research Programme. She is also an Andrew Carnegie Fellow and the Chair of the Board of the UN University Institute for the Advanced Study of Sustainability (UNU-IAS).

Ivanova serves on the External Advisory Board of the Environmental Solutions Initiative at MIT, on the Sustainability Advisory Council at Yale University, on the Carnegie Climate Governance Initiative (C2G2) Advisory Group, and on the Board of the Millennium Institute. In 2018, she chaired the jury for the $5 million New Shape Prize for global governance by the Global Challenges Foundation.

Professor Maria will be joining us On 23 September 2021 at 4 Pm to discuss her journey as a responsible researcher and shed light on some of her latest academic project.

Institute for Community Research and Development (ICRD) Research Café Gathering: The Road to co-learning and co-growth: exploration of knowledge creation and transfer process in Emerging Market (EM) post-acquisition.

Thursday 30th September 2021, 11:00, Online via Teams.

Dr Eun Sun Godwin, Lecturer in International Business at the University of Wolverhampton Business School.

Contact James Rees (James.Rees@wlv.ac.uk) for further information and to book.

Overview of the research: This ERAS project proposes exploring the effectiveness of knowledge creation, sharing and transfer in Emerging Market (EM) Multi-National Enterprises' (MNEs') post-acquisition processes in the West Midlands (WM). The aim of the project is to develop a conceptual framework on EM firms' post-acquisition strategy regarding knowledge and dynamic capability development process. For the methodology, I chose a 'historical' approach as most appropriate considering the 'explorative' nature of the project and also as a response to call from scholars of both history and organisational study/International Business for "bridging the gap" between the two disciplines.

About the talk: I would like to use this opportunity as a space where I can share some of the issues and challenges that have emerged with this project, particularly focusing on a couple of areas: firstly, disruption in the research in light of Covid and difficulties in data availability; and secondly, confidence issues in learning and applying a new methodology. Your thoughts and suggestions will be highly appreciated and thus, I would like the session to be very interactive and engaging one!

Novel Perceptions Research Project Event

BBC's Novels That Shaped Our World: The Big Reveal

Saturday 9th October 2021, 18:00 – 19:00, Bramall Music Building, The University of Birmingham, Edgbaston, Birmingham, B15 2TT.

Professor Sebastian Groes, Dr Tom Mercer and Dr Elizabeth Dearnley, University of Wolverhampton.

Book via: <https://www.birminghamliteraturefestival.org/events/novels-changed-world/>

In the 300 years since Daniel Defoe wrote Robinson Crusoe, which books have we valued the most as a society? And are these the same as the ones we truly enjoy?

The year-long BBC Arts project The Novels That Shaped Our World has celebrated English language fiction with a 100-strong list of novels designed to spark debates about the fiction that has had the largest impact on Britain.

As the project comes to an end, Professor Sebastian Groes and Dr Tom Mercer (University of Wolverhampton) of the AHRC-funded Big Book Review reveal how the public responded to these 100 novels with results from psychological research and computational analyses.

They will be joined in conversation with writer Novels That Shaped Our World panel member Kit de Waal (My Name is Leon, Common People), who will reflect on responses to the project in conversation with Dr Elizabeth Dearnley (University of Wolverhampton).

This event is part of Birmingham Literature Festival, free to attend but booking is required

Gospel Grime: Exploring the Relationship Between Christianity and Grime

Monday 11th October 2021, 17:00 –18:00, Online.

Speaker:- Samson Tosin Onafuye, University of Westminster.

Book via:- <https://www.eventbrite.co.uk/e/gospel-grime-exploring-the-relationship-between-christianity-and-grime-tickets-176522191627>

As part of Black History Month the University of Wolverhampton is pleased to present a talk with Samson Onafuye. Gospel grime is a Black-British religio-musical subgenre rooted in grime music's culture. This talk, therefore, introduces the history of Gospel grime and investigates how Black-British Christian-orientated MCs use grime cultural aesthetics to explore their Christian-orientated identities.

Named one of the 'youngest' lecturers to have lectured on the graduate and post-graduate music degree programmes at the University of Westminster, Samson Tosin Onafuye, is manifesting into a world-class scholar in the field of ethnomusicology. He has taught on a number of popular music modules at graduate and post-graduate levels.

What Should Black History Month Mean To Mixed-Race Britons

Thursday 14th October 2021, 13:00 –14:00, Online.

Speaker:- Stephen Bush, The New Statesman.

Book via:- <https://www.eventbrite.co.uk/e/what-should-black-history-month-mean-to-mixed-race-britons-tickets-180751200707>

As part of Black History Month the University of Wolverhampton is pleased to present a talk with British journalist Stephen Bush.

The fastest growing ethnicity in Britain is those who are mixed-race or of dual heritage. The proportion of Britons who were mixed-race nearly doubled between 2001 and 2011, and with over 3% of all children being born in Britain being mixed-race, a similar increase is expected when the results of this year's census are announced. In this talk Stephen Bush, the Political Editor of the New Statesman, will discuss what he feels Black History Month should mean to Mixed-Raced Britons.

Stephen Bush is one of Britain's leading political journalists, leading the New Statesman's political team since 2018. His work has also appeared in The Times, Guardian, Financial Times, and Independent. He also makes regular appearances on the BBC and SKY NEWS. He recently chaired the Board of Deputies of British Jews' ground-breaking investigation into how the Jewish community could better support Jewish people who are People of Colour.

In the Queer-View Mirror: Looking at 1991

Wednesday 27th October 2021, 17:00-18:15, Online (via Zoom).

Prof Nick Salvato (Cornell University)

Book via: <https://www.eventbrite.co.uk/e/in-the-queer-view-mirror-looking-at-1991-tickets-170194110165>

As a number of critics have demonstrated, certain years in the early 1990s—1992, 1993, 1994—could all be understood as watershed ones for the queering of North American television. Yet how would our television history, as well as our queer theorization of television, shift if we racked focus and paid closer attention to a putatively less promising year for queer TV, 1991? Taking up that central question, this lecture also extends and evolves a critical approach first developed in Salvato’s book Television Scales. In this case, the items constellated together are American media objects produced and distributed in 1991 that simultaneously—and co-constitutively—stake queer ground and make reflexive claims about television as a medium in significant transition, shading into upheaval. They include episodic series (thirtysomething, Roc), a cable special (Medusa: Dare to Be Truthful), and a mainstream film about television (Soapdish). Building on the idea of cross-serial textuality, Salvato demonstrates that we need, in addition to a method or methods for attending to cross-serial textuality, methodology for understanding textuality—especially queer textuality—cross-medially.

Bio

Nick Salvato is Professor of Performing and Media Arts at Cornell University. He is the author of four books: Uncloseting Drama: American Modernism and Queer Performance (Yale UP, 2010), Knots Landing (Wayne State UP, 2015), Obstruction (Duke UP, 2016), and Television Scales (punctum books, 2019). His numerous essays have appeared in such venues as Critical Inquiry, Camera Obscura, and Discourse.

Subject: Single film books. There has been a proliferation of single-film publications over the last fifteen years or so – often seen as offering the opportunity for a deep dive into one particular film, and an essential purchase (or gift) for fans of that film. Approaches to the films have been wide-ranging, and subjects stretch from classics to cult and, more recently, television series. This “in conversation” will be with Lindsay Hallam (University of East London), whose book on Twin Peaks: Fire Walk With Me was published in 2018 in the Devil’s Advocates series, and John Atkinson, Senior Commissioning Editor for Auteur / Liverpool University Press, which publishes the Devil’s Advocates and Constellations series. They will be joined by Dr Benjamin Halligan. Topics will include: scope and expectations of such books; how to write a single film book; how to go about preparing a pitch to a publisher; how to promote this research once it’s published.

Book via: <https://www.eventbrite.co.uk/e/anna-swam-the-canadian-giantess-re-reading-the-victorian-freakshow-tickets-161653508997?aff=ebdsoporgprofile>

We condemn Victorian perceptions of 'freakish' bodies as being exploitative. However, when turning to the detail of certain performers' lives, can a more complex picture emerge? This talk examines the life of Anna Swan, exhibited as 'the Canadian Giantess' on both sides of the Atlantic during the nineteenth century. Dr Helen Davies, Senior Lecturer in English Literature from the University of Wolverhampton suggests that re-reading newspaper accounts of her British tours (1869; 1871) offers some surprising challenges to traditional Victorian ideas of gender, sexuality, ethnicity, and class, as well as more modern understandings of disability.

This paper shares some challenges I have encountered as a researcher and a performance storyteller of medieval material that is often misogynist and racist.

In 2015, I was frustrated that the medieval gender and race studies research I had been immersed in throughout my academic studies of medieval literature rarely filters through to mainstream medievalist media, film and performance. When I'm annoyed about something, I promise somebody important that I will do something about it in a year and a day. So I recklessly promised to give an oral storytelling performance of Chaucer's Man of Law's Tale at a conference in Swansea.

This was the first of five medieval storytelling shows that I would go on to do, and which have ended up playing a bigger part in my career than I could have anticipated. The shows have played in cathedrals, theatres, museums, libraries, conferences and folk festivals here and in the USA.

What I hadn't expected was that my incorporation of feminist and queer research into these shows would be one of their most successful elements. Audience feedback testifies to the importance of this work, particularly for LGBTQ* people, who realise people like us existed, lived, loved and appeared in literature throughout history. Meanwhile, the academic and emotional labour involved in telling between the gaps in our sources has led to exciting new discoveries for me as a researcher, as well as a deeper understanding of how characters are marginalised due to gender or race.

Using my adaptation of Chaucer's Man of Law's Tale as a case study, this reflective paper shares some of the things I have learnt as a teller of medieval material, and asks what work might be done when sharing early materials that have an ingrained racist and gendered bias, and reflect on what this kind of work might offer our research and public engagement practice.

By way of new agonistic, feminist, and queer readings of Singin' in the Rain (1952) and Sorry to Bother You (2018), focused on the films' politics of race, gender, and sexuality, this talk argues that both Singin' and Sorry stage Bartleby-style refusals of vocal commodification. Singin' fabulates an origin story for the commodification of voice, lampooning concerns about its alienation. Where others seek to de-commodify voice by linking it to the maternal, the body, or the authentic self, Sorry contests such teleological techniques to sound out the uncertain voice of uprising. In both films, the heterosexual romance that is a key plot point is, first, soundtracked and then sidetracked by a Black sonic that can be queered. In Singin' the Black sonic is the dubbed-in sounds of tap, and in Sorry it is the strange equine roar of uprising. Highlighting both films' conformities to and departures from Stanley Cavell's comedies of remarriage, in which the woman of the pair supposedly finds her voice (though maybe that voice finds her and will not let her go), this talk considers the implications of remarriage as a political-cultural figure and highlights an alternative to it: a sonic waywardness in which sound travels, teleology withers, and the vox populi is open to question and contestation. Only in Sorry is refusal collectivized, diegetically, though its vision is one of antagonism not agonism, its collectivity is small and male, and the queerness of its posthuman (bacchic) turn remains to be read.

How do prison communities make use of libraries? What fiction is most popular, and how do education and gender play a role within the curation of prison book collections?

As part of the Big Book Review - the largest ever survey of opinions about what fiction is really valued by readers across Britain - Professor Sebastian Groes (University of Wolverhampton) from the AHRC-funded Novel Perceptions project speaks to prison librarians from across the UK to understand how prisoners make use of libraries.

Evidence suggests that participation in prison education reduces reoffending and increases P45 employment. How does reading fit in with HM Prison & Probation Service's policy to support upskilling, improve literacy, and stimulate effective resettlement? What can those outside of prisons learn from HMPPS's aim to promote reading as a source of pleasure and opportunity for wider cultural engagement? How can we ensure that conversations about the books we value as a society include all voices? Join us for this unique insight into the world of reading in prisons.

Thursday 16th December 2021, 19:00-20:30, Online.

Online via Teams – Link provided on booking

Book via: <https://www.eventbrite.co.uk/e/the-university-of-wolverhampton-christmas-time-lecture-tickets-190156512247>

The University of Wolverhampton Christmas-Time Lecture is now in its 5th year and still going strong. Using the festive song 'When Santa Got Stuck Up The Chimney' as our muse, this year's University of Wolverhampton Christmas-Time Lecture will take a humorous look at what might happen to poor old Santa Claus, and the advice that University of Wolverhampton experts might offer to help with his predicament. The lecture will take a satirical look at why Santa chooses to access your property through the chimney and not the door, who is liable if Santa does get stuck, Santa's health and wellbeing, disaster causation and why Santa hasn't learned from past experiences, what happens to Santa if he doesn't get out and what transpires if doesn't get stuck but is caught kissing mummy underneath the mistletoe. This year's lecture will draw on the expertise of the Institute of Sport, the Institute of Psychology, The University of Wolverhampton Law School, the STEM Response Team, The Black Country Living Museum, The Emergency Management and Resilience Centre, and The Doctoral College

Monday 7th February 2022, 10:00 – 16:00, Online via Canvas.

Dr Debra Cureton and Dr Ben Halligan, Doctoral College.

Book via: <https://www.eventbrite.co.uk/e/symposium-employability-conference-part-two-tickets-168242569053>

The second part of the Employability Conference takes place on 7th February 2022. The first part of the session will be open to all PGRS and will provide some development opportunities around interview technique, interview questions and presentation skills.

The interviews will take place during the afternoon of the 7th February and will be carried out by people within the University who have experience of interviewing for lecturing posts, leadership roles and post-doctoral research roles. The interview will be delivered against the selected job description and the personal statement that the PGRS prepares. The interview will be about 45 minutes and will include 20/25 minute interview time; 10 minutes face to face feedback and some written feedback. Interviews will be conducted by senior managers at the University of Wolverhampton.

The outline schedule for the day is as follows:

- 10am - 11am Imposter Syndrome
- 11am - 12noon Interview Questions
- 1pm - 4pm Interview Sessions (only for those who have applied after attending Part One of the Employability Conference on 13th December, 2021)

Doctoral College UoW Lecture

University of Wolverhampton Lecture: What does it mean to be well for a person with prostate cancer?

Wednesday 6th April 2022, 18:00 – 19:00, Online via Teams – Link provided on booking

David Matheson, Institute of Health, Faculty of Education, Health and Wellbeing, University of Wolverhampton.

Book via: <https://www.eventbrite.co.uk/e/uow-lecture-series-dr-david-matheson-tickets-172116815027>

Prostate cancer is now the most common male cancer in the United Kingdom and is heading to be the most common male cancer in the world. Currently, around 50,000 men each year in the UK are diagnosed with the disease and around 11,000 men die from it each year. There are around 250,000 of us who are currently living with the disease. I say “us” not only because I am a man (and only folk born male have a prostate) but also because I am living with prostate cancer. I was first diagnosed in 2012, treated in 2012-13, and since then I have relapsed twice and had to be treated for secondary tumours. One was in my pelvis and the other in the spine. I live every day with effects of the disease and the effects of the treatments and I live with the constant knowledge that I may well relapse once again. I also live with constant knowledge that this disease may one day kill me. The important bit is that I live.

I have been a volunteer with a couple of prostate cancer charities since 2013 and this brings me into contact with a lot of people who have (or have had) the disease and, as importantly, with people close to folk who have (or have had) the disease. This got me thinking one day about wellness. Despite everything, I feel generally well. The everything, incidentally, includes chronic fatigue, regular pain, and stress and anxiety every time I wait for the results of blood tests or scans. For me, prostate cancer is part of the wallpaper of my life. So, I tried to define what it meant to me, as a person with prostate cancer, to be well. This got me wondering what being well was like for other folk who have (or have had) prostate cancer and what it was like for those close to them. With this in mind, my favourite co-author, my wife Catherine, and I set out to find out. We created a short survey that was circulated via social media and we conducted interviews.

This lecture is about what we found.

Researchers' Week 2022

20-24 June

Annual Research Conference (ARC): Monday 20th – Tuesday 21st June

The only conference for all research staff, research students and staff who support research, to showcase research, build networks, and connect with staff and students from across the University.

The official call for contributions will be circulated in early 2022 but in the meantime please give some thought to taking part next year. This is a great opportunity to showcase your project in a supportive academic environment and receive feedback to inform the development of your research.

Conference presentations

We welcome individual or group contributions from staff and research students of all disciplines, topics, and stages of research. We'd like you to choose how you present, options include but are not limited to:

- Standard conference presentation (20 mins)
- Short talk on developing research projects (10 mins)
- Round table discussions
- Performance/screening/artefacts
- Pecha Kucha - a presentation style in which 20 slides are shown for 20 seconds each (six minutes and 40 seconds in total). The format keeps presentations concise and fast-paced.

The Research Student Poster Competition and Doctoral Depictions Photo Competition will also be back next year and details will be sent out early in 2021.

Researchers' Week Events: Wednesday 22nd – Friday 24th June

Following on from ARC the Doctoral College organise an extended series of training and development workshops across the rest of the week. More details will be made available in the updated Semester Two Almanac.

About the Researcher Development Framework (RDF)

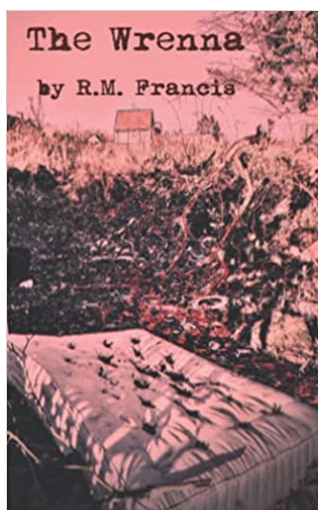

The Researcher Development Statement (RDS) sets out the knowledge, behaviours and attributes of effective and highly skilled researchers appropriate for a wide range of careers. The RDS is for policy makers and research organisations which provide personal, professional and career development for researchers in higher education. The Researcher Development Statement is derived from the Researcher Development Framework (RDF), a major new approach to researcher development, which aims to enhance our capacity to build the UK workforce, develop world-class researchers and build our research base.

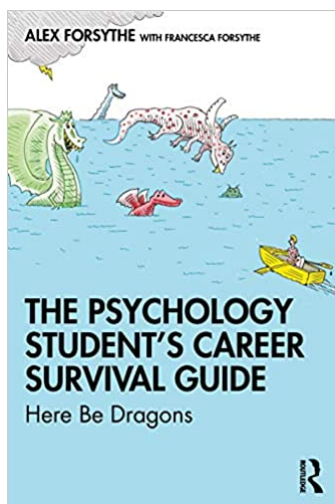

The University of Wolverhampton subscribes to the Vitae Research Development Framework. The RDF is structured in four domains encompassing the knowledge, intellectual abilities, techniques and professional standards to do research, as well as the personal qualities, knowledge and skills to work with others and ensure the wider impact of research. Within each of the domains are three sub-domains and associated descriptors, which describe different aspects of being a researcher.

For more information on the Researcher Development Framework and associated Statement go to www.vitae.ac.uk/rdf
